After his irrevocable and defiant stand with the reactionaries of his party he earned and he is now receiving the plaudits of a subsidized Republican press. Knowing that an analysis of his record would destroy his claim to public confidence, they have confined themselves to a frantic and lachrymal appeal to popular commiseration.

I do not object to Mr. Beckham's making a free exhibition of his festering wounds. He has a perfect right to pose as a political Lazarus. If he has nothing more edifying or instructive to offer the public, but I do object to the politics of the pack who are forever growling about it. I abhor the pedigree of that pair of journalistic mongrels who persist in picking his sores and picking at their scabs in public.

This Louisville Herald is terribly "put out" at the very idea of my opposing Mr. Beckham. He and Augustus E. Wilson have long been prime favorites with that Republican periodical. My probe of the Steel Trust "pestered" this paper not a little, and that corporation has detailed some penny-a-liner, some superserviceable back, to scribble about me in its editorial columns. How I have honestly earned the implacable hostility of that subsidized sheet! Its commendation is a positive encumbrance to any honest man. As everybody knows, the so-called Schaffer Syndicate owns the Louisville Herald, "boots and breeches," Daniel G. Reed, the Tin Plate King, owns the Schaffer Syndicate, and the United States Steel Corporation owns Daniel G. Reed. He is the he-elephant among its managers and directors.

The incorruptible and intelligent Democracy of Kentucky will neither desert me nor support Mr. Beckham, because some literary lackey of the Steel Trust denounces me as a "quitter" or a "demagogue."

No man can oppose any form of corporate or political iniquity without arousing the wrath of Richard W. Knott. The Louisville Post is as changeless as original sin in its advocacy of everything that is evil in our social, industrial and political existence. It is the same sinister servant of homicide and crookedness which yesterday hounded William Goebel to his grave, and then, hyena-like, attempted to mangle his dead body and to blacken his memory.

Let him not dream that he can ever sneak, like a wolf in sheep's clothing, back into a Democratic fold, after canonizing Caleb Powers and weeping over the neck of Bill Taylor, when an indignant and outraged Democracy had made an outcast of that usurper.

I hear his relentless hate has a badge of honor. I seek neither the commendation nor the support of panders to corruption and an apologist for murder.

This venomous viper, whose facetious tooth rankled in the lion heart of William Goebel, is coiled ready to strike at any breast bared in defense of popular government or the people's rights. Who paid for the Post during the reign of terror in Kentucky? Who distributed it free to whomsoever would handle it with a pair of tongs? The Louisville & Nashville Railroad is not bankrupt, and this pariah of the press who has reduced falsehood to a fine art and made a trade of tradition is still doing business at the same old stand.

Mummon has moved a magic wand over the reeking waters of this cesspool of slander and tradition, and I expect to be deluged by this Republican cloak of printers' ink and filth.

Fifteen years ago this same pair of conspirators against Democratic principles and Democratic success attempted to muddy the waters and divert the issue when Goebel, the great progressive of this age, warned his party and his people against their machinations with this stern and solemn warning: "I have endeavored ever since I became a candidate for Governor to point out to the Democracy of the State what really is the issue in this fight. I am now repeating that the bottom question in this contest is, whether the laws of Kentucky shall be made, whether the laws of Kentucky shall be construed, whether the laws of Kentucky shall be executed, by the people of the State, or by the corporation, as the L. & N. Railroad?"

They could not cloud the issue then and they shall not dodge it now. It is true that my opponent followed this great reformer in sequence of time, but I dispute his claim as his successor. He has carried out all his politics—"on a stretcher." His administration followed the illustrious leader-adip of this fearless and stainless figure as the night succeeds the day, and under it his great measures, like his murdered body, were consigned to the tomb.

It was the issue then, as it is the issue now. The white tents of an aroused and undelivered Democracy are spread upon a field, incarnadined with a hero's blood, and I here invoke the immortal spirit of an exalted patriot to nerve our arms in a noble cause; for I can not believe that all eternity can ever dis sever us from the love of him who, even in the agonies of death, was not unmindful of his people's wrongs, and who adjured us to preserve their rights with lips pallid with the seal of eternal sleep.

Inspired by his example, dedicated at the altar of his awful sacrifice, Democracy stern and determined redeemed the State by a majority of thirty thousand strong.

After the lapse of eight years another's acts and another's administration became the issue. If the departed in that dim and distant beyond know aught of our activities here below, it must, even in Elysium, have wrung with agony the soul of William Goebel to behold the scepter of authority returned to the black hand of Republicanism, the very institutions and the very interests which had butchered him, high in the councils of his party, and that mantle, dabbled with his blood, falling from the shoulders of his successor, at the feet of the President of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad company.
